

There are a number of misconceptions and myths surrounding the field of interior design. Buying into these myths can be detrimental to the look and feel of your home. At Tall Pines Interiors, we want to make sure you have the home you love. Continue reading this blog to learn the truth behind these common myths.

Interior design is unaffordable

Interior design isn't always expensive. Tall Pines Interiors will work within the parameters of your specific budget and needs. If you are planning to work on your living room, then we will only work on your living room. We can do as little or as much as you'd like.

Interior designers make all the decisions about your home

Interior design is a collaborative process. That means, we'll rely on you to provide the details on your design preferences when it comes to colours, textures, flow, and patterns. Although we have a keen eye for design, we want to bring your vision together to create the home you desire.

Interior design is a luxury and not a necessity

The look and feel of your home can play a big role on how you enjoy your home. The aesthetic appeal is always a bonus. Tall Pines Interiors will work with you to make sure there is a balance of aesthetics and functionality. When the right interior design elements are in place, our services can serve as an investment for your home.

"I can design and furnish my home on my own"

While this may be true, it can be overwhelming to make all the design decisions about your home. It can be especially overwhelming when you don't have a background in design. Designing your home with flow and functionality in mind can be a big job that can create a lot of stress. Collaborate with the interior design professionals who can lend a hand in making your home's vision a reality.

We hope we've clarified these commonly held misconceptions about interior design. If you have any questions about your services, or if you'd like to learn more, feel free to contact us. Together, we make a house your home.
